ARCHAEOLOGICAL FIELDWORK:

2023 Team Member: Ankara, Kalecik, Akyurt, Çubuk and Kahramankazan: A surface Survey of Classical, Roman, and Byzantine Periods. • Project Director: Prof. Dr. Çiğdem Gençler (Ankara University, Turkey).

This project aims to investigate the development of the area north of Ankara over time. This region was one of the epicenters of the Galatian occupation in the Hellenistic period as well as the hinterland of the main Roman city in central Anatolia. Preliminary results will be published in the course of 2024.

2022-Present Co-Principal Investigator: Bathonea Antik Kentinde, Küçükçekmece, Istanbul (with Alkiviadis Ginalis, German Archaeological Institute, Istanbul). • Project Director: Prof. Dr. Şengül Aydıngün (Kocaeli University, Turkey).

This project aims to study the development of a major site in the hinterlands of Constantinople in relation to changes in the capital. The site is located on a natural bay fed by an interconnected system of rivers, and it represents the main natural harbor near Constantinople.

2021-Present Co-Principal Investigator: Ravenna Wetlands Project. (Ravenna, Italy) (with Marco Cavalazzi, University of Bologna-Ravenna).

The project aims to examine the response of local communities to environmental change in the northern hinterlands of Ravenna, a complex ecosystem that underwent a profound transformation (movement of rivers, heavy erosion, and sedimentation) from the 3rd c. CE onward.

2021-Present Co-Principal Investigator: Tarsus-Gözlükule: the Roman phases. (Tarsus, Turkey) (with Cristina Mondin, University of Padua). • Project Director: Prof. Dr. Asli Özyar (Boğaziçi University, Turkey).

This project explores a lamp and terracotta figurine production center established on the Gözlükule mound during the High Roman Period. This productive center emerged in connection with the foundation of a massive imperial cult temple in the city, and this project aims to investigate further this relationship.

2017-Present Principal Investigator: Manufacturing goods: the case of Late Roman pottery production and circulation in Central Anatolia (with Dr. Cristina Mondin, University of Padua).

The project examines the impact of Roman rule and its changes over time on the emergence and development of local specialized industry (Sigillata and Red Slip fine ware) between the 1st and 7th c. CE in western-central Anatolia (roughly the area now delimited by Ankara, Eskişehir, Isparta, and Konya).

2016-Present Area Supervisor: Sinop Kale Excavations. (Sinop, Turkey). • Project Director: Prof. Owen Doonan (California State University Northridge, USA).

The project intends to examine the long-term development of Sinop, one of the most prominent Graeco-Roman cities on the southern Black Sea Coast. Our study has adopted a regional approach (combination of urban excavation and countryside survey) to better contextualize the changes in Sinop's urban fabric. The project has been halted due to COVID-19 and it is currently in the publication stage. Fieldwork may resume soon.

2018-2020 Co-Principal Investigator: Gabii after the Romans. (Gabii, Italy) (with Marco Cavalazzi, University of Bologna-Ravenna). • Project Director: Prof. Nicola Terrenato (University of Michigan, USA).

The project investigated the Late Roman and Medieval phases of Gabii, near Rome, where a complex settlement re-developed from the 6th c. CE onward. The project is currently at the publication stage.
